Questions & Answers:

Q1. The advertisement currently calls for using the BZ performance rating, but a question was raised regarding whether or not it is the best performance rating to use. Can you please confirm if you'd like to use the BZ performance rating or provide me with the rating you'd rather use?

A1. Yes we are using the BZ rating as stated in the ad.

Q2. The minimal personnel requirements calls for a minimum of 10 years of experience in designing roadway lighting with the last three years of experience with LADOTD projects, but does this have to be the same person or can it be satisfied by two people, one with 10 years of experience in designing roadway lighting and the other with three years of experience with LADOTD projects?

A2. Yes this can be satisfied by two people.

Q3. Can a firm submit as a prime consultant on one team and also submit as a sub-consultant on another team? Below is the wording from the advertisement.

“Multiple firms that are listed on a single proposal (e.g., prime consultants as well as listed sub-consultants) will be considered a “Team.” Only one Consultant or Team will be selected for each contract to be awarded pursuant to a Request for Qualifications. A Team may submit more than one proposal reflecting different allocations of work or different combinations of prime and sub-consultants, but in no instance will a single Team be awarded more than one contract from a single Request for Qualifications.”

A3. Yes they can.
