Q2. Is roadway lighting expected to be part of the scope of work?

A2. No.

Q3. What is an “electronic data processing applications” referring to?

A3. The “electronic data processing applications” is referring to the design software.

Q4. What is the magnitude and scope of expected sanitary drainage?

A4. In cases where the owner of the sanitary utility is unable to afford the cost to relocate the utility, DOTD may absorb these cost by including the relocation in the construction plans. The Consultant is expected to include any provided relocation plans and items in their plan submittal packages. The Consultant is not expected, but may be asked to design sanitary systems or relocation plans. However, this would be a rare occurrence.

Q5. Are construction proposal services required from the Consultant?

A5. Construction proposals will be provided by DOTD, except when the need arises within the District for the Consultant to provide these services. The Consultant is expected to be able to perform this work if they are tasked with it.
